Academic Leader and Developer of the Temple of Justice Project (TJP), <http://templeofjustice.org/>, 2009-14.

TJP is a multimedia archive and educational resource devoted to the Washington State Supreme Court and its work. Originally developed as a collaborative effort between scholars at WSU and the Oyez Project at Northwestern University, the site was assumed by the Washington Courts Historical Society in 2014. Modeled on the website of the Oyez Project, the TJP uses audio and video along with a user-friendly interface to compile and store the Supreme Court of Washington's essential documents; decisions, taped oral arguments, and a vast amount of other historical, archival, and scholarly materials in a single accessible database and website. It also provides original data and analysis of decision-making trends on the Court. It aims to provide the most comprehensive online point of contact about the Court for members of the general public, the media, and experts and scholars interested in research.
